CSUSB Vigil in Remembrance of Jordyn Rivera

On Oct. 10, a vigil was held at the Santos Manuel Student Union Event Center to honor the life of 21-year-old Jordyn Rivera, one of the victims of the Route 91 Harvest festival shooting in Las Vegas--the most deadly mass shooting in American history.

Rivera was a fourth-year student at CSUSB in the health care management program and also a member of Eta Sigma Gamma, the national health education honor society. An estimated 400 faculty members, staff, friends, and family attended the vigil to honor her memory.

Vice President for Student Affairs Dr. Brian Haynes presided over the vigil, introducing many guest speakers to speak on behalf of Rivera and the impact she made on their lives.

The first speaker was university President Tomás D. Morales, who got to know Rivera when she participated in a summer abroad program in London last summer. Morales emphasized the joy and optimism she expressed in all that she did, and that although tragedy has struck, those in attendance should find the strength to be thankful Rivera touched their lives.

The next speaker was Pastor Dustin Harrison, a Youth Minister at Calvary Chapel in Chino Valley. As Rivera's youth minister, Harrison marveled at the amount of faith and hope she possessed, and advised attendees to find peace in knowing she is in a better place.

"If Jordyn were to speak to us tonight, she would say, 'You need to have that hope I had.

Because everything I looked forward to I get to enjoy right now. Because when we say rest in peace, I am resting in the presence of God,'" stated Harrison.

Other guest speakers who got to share their memories of Rivera were those who were involved with her in Eta Sigma Gamma, like former president Hannah Lewis, who shared a Bible verse that reminded her of the fallen student: For we walk by faith, not by sight- 2 Corinthians 5:7 KJV.

California On Fire

By Andrea Engelhorn
Managing Editor

Since Oct. 4, wildfires have been scorching through Northern California taking the lives and homes of people, young and old.

These fires have burned over 221,000 acres of land, killing 31 people and destroying 2,800 residences.

Winds of up to 70 miles per hour aided the rapid spread of flames, but the cause of the outbreak is still under investigation.

Bodies burned beyond recognition have been found, along with human remains of merely ash and bone. Authorities are turning to dental records, fingerprints, tattoos and serial numbers on hip implants to identify victims.

Over 3,500 structures have been destroyed throughout Northern California since the beginning of the outbreak.

Sonoma, Mendocino, Yuba, and Napa County have all been devastated by this unfortunate series of fires, with evacuations still in action in hope to save lives.

Pros and Cons: Tuition Increase

By Daniel Banks
Staff Writer

The rise of tuition at CSUSB and other CSU schools by $270 for undergraduate students has been generating some negative buzz among students, but has officials pointing to the positive aspects.

The decision was made by the Board of Trustees on March 22, 2017, and was the first tuition increase in seven years.

Many of the students that attend CSUSB are receiving financial aid and do not pay out of the pocket for classes, but that isn't always the case.

Some students are paying for school with their own money, or, with student loans because they do not meet the requirements to receive grants. Financial burdens can sometimes add more stress to a person, especially when they're enrolled in college.

"Before I started my first quarter at CSUSB, I was hesitant about taking out school loans," said CSUSB Junior James Johnson. "I wasn't able to receive more than one grant and I knew that the only other option was to use student loans. I did not want to spend years having to pay for it and be in debt."

CSU Spokesperson Elizabeth Chaplin explains the decision to increase tuition.

"Tuition was increased because the state did not fully fund the CSU's budget request," said Chaplin. "The CSU's operating budget has two funding sources: the state general fund and tuition. Over the last two-and-a-half decades, state support per student for the CSU has declined while enrollment demands have dramatically increased."

One of the high points Chaplin brings up is that it will benefit the students who are a part of household income.

"The net revenue is one third and it is set aside for student financial aid."

Part of the tuition increase will go towards hiring more faculty and adding more courses to the curriculum; however, there is direct statement that addresses that the tuition increases have to be spent on such or if a certain amount of the increase has to be dedicated towards academic advancements and not faculty or board-members salaries.

"The tuition increase will go to the students' success. Campuses will hire approximately 400 faculty members and an additional 3,000 courses," said Chaplin.

No word which CSU campuses will benefit from these increase. There are 23 CSU campuses and if the estimated 400 faculty members are divvied up evenly, each campus will get around 17 additional members.

The increase of tuition has come as a shock to some students because they haven't experienced it throughout their time at CSUSB. This is the first increase in seven years.

The increase took undergraduate annual tuition from

Disability Sports Festival

By Adam Vilas
Staff Writer

CSUSB hosted its 11th annual Disability Sports Festival to promote physical activity for people everywhere, regardless of their disability.

Everyday those with disabilities struggle to find a place where they can let loose and have fun without worrying about feeling out of place.

Event director and 14 year CSUSB employee Yvonne Salmon said this event is an important day for the community and fulfills a need for those with disabilities.

"The reason we do this is because we believe that disability does not mean inability," said Salmon. "We want every person to have the feeling that they can do anything. We want them to be encouraged and say 'I can do this. I don't have limitations.'"

According to Salmon, this event has gained enough popularity in the community for participants to request information about it months in advance because of their excitement for the festival.

Residents in the community expressed their excitement for the event, anticipating next year's Disability Sports Festival.

Marcus Rivera, who has been in a wheelchair for over 20 years, says that this festival is one that he looks forward to year-round.

"I feel as though this festival is a gift from above," said Rivera. "People with disabilities often get forgotten about and this day is a great way to show that Cal State San Bernardino really cares about us."

Students and faculty alike participated in the event to make the festival possible. The CSUSB Assistant Basketball Coach, Bobby Tossetti, and his team played games of wheelchair-basketball with those with disabilities in the Coussoulis Arena.

"We want to put our guys in a position where they can help," said Tossetti. "We want them to help less fortunate people so they can understand that they are in a position not everyone gets to be in."

Hundreds of volunteers came to the event and showed their support for those with disabilities. One of the event volunteers, Christine Espeleta, believes that it is important for those more fortunate to understand more about those with disabilities in order to help.

"This day is for them," said Espeleta. "These events were made for them to make them feel like they're still a part of us and despite any differences they're still human."

The event took place in the Coussoulis Arena on campus where hundreds of people with disabilities came to participate in a range of sports and games. These included activities like martial arts classes, rock-climbing, soccer, basketball and even archery.

Many sponsors came and showed their support for the Disability Sports Festival including the LA Galaxy Street Team, LA Kings Street Hockey Team, and Monster Energy.

"I think it's really important for them to have a day like this," said Taylor Dizon, a CSUSB senior and event volunteer. "It makes them feel included and like they can get involved in things that they can actually participate in."

Adam Vilas | Coyote Chronicle

Various events were hosted by volunteers for participants.

Tuition Increase

For various reasons, some students are not fortunate enough to receive financial aid. The tuition increase can affect them in a major way. Not only does it affect the class fees, but it also makes the price of parking go up.

"The tuition increase has been rough," said CSUSB senior Genevieve Gonzalez. "It made it even harder to afford classes as well as everything else that comes with being in school. That includes paying for parking passes, which have also increased."

The increased fees can affect how many units a student takes each quarter; and with CSUSB transitioning to the semester system, students will be hassled with a greater financial burden.

"I haven't had to take fewer units due to financial aid, but I did contemplate doing so or taking a whole quarter off," revealed Gonzalez.

Not knowing how they will be able to pay for their classes can cause stress emotionally and mentally.

"Other than my financial aid, the tuition increase caused a lot of stress on me because I wasn't sure what was going to happen--if I would be able to come up with the money or not," stated Gonzalez.

There are positive and negative effects when to the tuition hike and it benefits some more than others. It is in the hope that the financial situation will benefit more students, so they can worry less about their finances and can continue with their college careers at ease.

CSUSB Vigil in Remembrance of Jordyn Rivera

Crystal Harrell | Coyote Chronicle

The vigil was very emotional for her friends and family and those that knew her personally.

People leaving personal messages for Jordyn Rivera.

Another fellow Eta Sigma Gamma member, James Eckholdt, shared how Rivera was like family and helped him through his times of struggle and hardship.

"I was working two jobs and I was wondering day by day, 'how will I be able to afford this? How will I pay rent?' And Jordyn was always there to comfort me. To tell me, 'you realize it's in God's hands,'" Eckholdt said through tears. "... She was a very faithful person... and that's how we all have to live our lives. Even if it's not through God, just live for something."

Lupita Vasquez, who attended the summer abroad program to London with Rivera, expressed her sadness over the loss of such a caring person.

"[Jordyn] was a real-life angel and she didn't need a halo or wings to prove it. We have lost a beautiful person way too soon and I hope she is watching over us wherever she is," said Vasquez.

Rivera's parents, Albert and Mary, also shared their words with those gathered in the auditorium, reminiscing about how Jordyn believed that she was living a full and happy life.

The two expressed their gratitude for the support of the CSUSB community and encouraged all vigil attendees to approach them to share their condolences.

"Don't be a stranger... Every time we hug you, we're hugging her," urged Albert Rivera.

After the vigil was over, the crowd was invited to step outside near the back of the John M. Pfau Library to release balloons as one last parting farewell to honor Rivera. 104 lavender balloons were released into the sky, followed by a moment of silence as bells chimed in the distance to echo the lasting memory of an honorable person.

Albert and Mary Rivera both visited and spoke at the campus that their daughter attended.

President Morales was amongst the attendees that visited Jordyn Rivera's vigil.

Locals share their accounts of horrific mass shooting in Las Vegas

Manny B Sandoval
Yucaipa-Calimesa News Mirror

The Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department confirmed 59 concertgoers died and 527 were injured in the largest mass shooting in American history on Sunday, Oct. 1 at the Route 91 Harvest Country Music Festival. According to San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department, a mass shooting occurred at the country concert in Las Vegas, Nevada. The suspect rapidly opened fire on a crowd of more than 22,000 concertgoers from his hotel room on the 32nd floor of the Mandalay Bay Resort and Casino at approximately 10:08 p.m.

The shooter was 64 years old Nevada resident. A Las Vegas Metropolitan Police report said the suspect bought more than 30 weapons and had 23 firearms in his hotel room.

The victims were across the street attending the Route 91 Harvest Country Music Festival when hundreds of bullets struck the crowd. Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department SWAT responded to the call, breached the hotel room and found the suspect dead.

Kaila Morales, a recent CSUSB graduate and KFROG Radio employee was in attendance with her close friend Cassidy Kitchen, when the shots were fired.

"As Jason Aldean started performing I stood and recorded a video," she said. "My friend and I were in the middle toward the back and we decided to try to make our way into the crowd going closer to the stage to meet up with another friend. As we were already holding onto each other, making our way through the crowd, we heard what sounded like fireworks. I have seen Jason Aldean before and at every concert he has fireworks, so my initial thought was, 'what was that fireworks?'"

Morales said she and Kitchen stood there confused noticing there was nothing in the sky and they continued to hear the shots go off.

"No those are gun shots! Get down. Get down. They're shooting," said Kitchen.

Morales recalled that it all happened so quickly, but it felt like a long time because of the shots continuing to fire.

Morales and Kitchen, hand in hand, ran for their lives. Morales said she was angry and yelling, she couldn't believe that was happening.

Both Morales and Kitchen called their family.

"As Cassidy called her sister to tell them we were being shot at. Both frantic, I decided to call my mom because at this point we didn't know if we're going to make it out of there. It was then we realized that this bush we were hiding behind was giving us no protected shelter, so we had to go," Morales said. "As I cried hysterically, we began to run again and passed a few parked cop cars and we ran straight inside the MGM Hotel and Casino. I thought I was going to have a panic attack and I was having trouble breathing, but my friend stayed by my side comforting me."

About 20 minutes later, while in MGM's lobby there was word that the gunman was now inside MGM. Morales and Kitchen, along with others, were evacuated once again. They ran into the casino's theater and hid in its basement, where they stayed for over two hours.

Morales said, "Luckily all the friends we came with were okay and although we are all traumatized, we are all home and safe."

A large portion of the crowd was from California and many attendees won tickets to the festival from local country radio stations.

"We gave away tickets to well over 100 listeners," said KFROG Radio Programming Director and Yucaipa resident Scott Ward. "We were systematically calling them all one by one on Monday. When you win anything from us we have your phone number and email addresses documented; there were around 20 names that we have not made contact with."

"I've gone the past two years. This year I didn't go, because we have such an amazing crew. We had our programming, promotions, sales staff, management and some folks from our off-air positions. All of our crew is accounted for and safe. Everyone wanted to get out as quick as they could," continued Ward.

The victims were transported to area hospitals for treatment for their injuries sustained from the violent attack. Some of the concertgoers were employees and residents from the County of San Bernardino.

"I am saddened by the many lives lost," said San Bernardino County Sheriff John McMahon. "One of our department members was struck by the gunfire while attending the event. Our employee was taken to a local hospital for treatment of injuries sustained. More information will follow when it is available. Our thoughts and prayers go out to all victims and their families."

"We continue to hope and pray that everyone is okay. Thousands of people from Southern California make it out to this event in Las Vegas every year. We talked with many listeners that were there, some who jumped into action and some who saw things they will never forget," Ward said. "Right now our top priority is confirming the safety of our listeners, then figuring out what we can do to help those affected by this senseless act."

There were 17 people from Southern California killed in the shooting. One of those 17 was Hannah Ahlers, 35, a Beaumont resident. She is survived by her husband Brian Ahlers and their three children. Dana Gardner, 52, was a Grand Terrace Resident and San Bernardino County employee. She is survived by three children, one of which was with her at the time of the shooting, Kayla Gardner, but she was not injured. Jordyn Rivera, 21, a fourth year student at CSUSB was also killed in the shooting. Rivera is a resident of Upland and is survived by her mother and father Albert and Mary Rivera.

Following the shootings, Las Vegas area hospitals experienced a shortage of blood. LifeStream urged the public to give blood donations. As of Monday night, Oct. 2, LifeStream released a statement saying they were overwhelmed with the amount of support they received and that they obtained a more than adequate amount of blood.

CSUSB Disaster Preparedness

By Andrea Engelhorn
Managing Editor

With the recent tragedy in Las Vegas, the topic of disaster preparedness becomes a reality at the forefront of our minds. After such a devastating event, students and faculty begin to look at the campus and the potential for disaster.

According to April Wing, the manager of Emergency Management and Business Continuity at CSUSB, our campus could have up to twenty-two thousand students present at a single given time.

She expressed that due to our campus's location and population, we are vulnerable to disaster. Wing believes that students shouldn't feel afraid, but instead, feel the need to be prepared in case a disaster should strike.

"We are vulnerable to disasters that students and faculty might not be aware of," said Wing. "For example, floods, fires, bomb threats, active violence, earthquakes, and more." On October 19 at 10:19 a.m., there will be a California Great Shakeout, in which the CSUSB community participates each year. Wing encourages students and faculty to participate in the drill and learn about earthquake safety and procedures.

Wing stresses that it is important to practice emergency procedures because people tend to act as they are trained, and if students and faculty on campus are trained how to react during a campus emergency, then they will most likely use that knowledge during a real disaster.

Cyber Security Professor and primary Amateur Radio presence on campus, Vincent Nestler, is attempting to expand the use of an emergency radio system, Amateur Radio (Ham Radio), on campus which is currently in use worldwide.

Unfamiliar to most students, Ham Radio license holders are present at CSUSB. Dr. Nestler and several students on campus carry these radios with them on a daily basis, because the Ham Radio system is in place to contact others around the world, even during a nationwide power outage.

Dr. Nestler explains that anyone can qualify to carry an emergency radio because it is affordable and acquirable.

"In order to become a licensed carrier, all it takes is a short, multiple choice quiz and the purchase of a twenty to thirty dollar radio... that's it," Dr. Nestler exclaimed. "Once a person is licensed, they are prepared with this radio for the rest of their life. There really isn't any loss in trying."

Wing believes that most students and faculty are not consciously planning ahead for disaster because it seems so far away until it is actually happening.

In order for an individual to better prepare one's self for disaster, Wing suggests that students and faculty visit the Risk Management and Emergency Continuity website on the CSUSB main site and the American Red Cross website for information on how to prepare for and react properly during a disaster.

Wing also recommends that students sign up for crime alerts on the University Police page through the CSUSB main site and to heed all messages from campus during an emergency on or near campus.

Dr. Nestler stressed the importance of disaster preparedness for everyone: "If you haven't noticed, the world is on fire. When the grid goes down, being prepared, whether through educating yourself or getting your Ham Radio license, can save your life or the life of someone you love."

Vox Pop: How safe is our campus?

Gabriela Manzanares:

"I don't feel prepared for an unnatural disaster because the events that have happened since I've been here, like the recent shootings. I was freaking out, thinking 'what's going to happen?'"

Jesse Ibarra, a fourth-year student, 21-years-old:

"I feel safe on campus. They handled [San Bernardino 2015 shooting] it really quickly, so I feel like if a shooter came on campus, they'd be able to handle that one just as quickly."

Mai Temraz, 3rd-year MBA, 32-years-old:

"I'm from Palestine. I have been through three wars, so I know disasters can be natural or caused by humans. I was only recently told about the earthquakes here because I arrived in the country last September. I'm a Ham radio operator and we have our own network, but I don't know how prepared we can be."

Tomas Morales, CSUSB President:

"These disasters are on our radar, both natural and manmade. Unfortunately, manmade is becoming more prevalent. We have active shooter drills, both past and present. We need to be prepared. There is a difference between an active shooter drill versus just being 'aware' in a classroom setting about it."

Emely Chavez, 1st-year student, 17 years old:

"I only know of the earthquake drill, but we should have a thing like the yearly sexual violence training. I don't feel as safe as I would like to. In high school there were drills, but not really in college. These kinds of things are not discussed until they actually happen."

Wyatt Miera, CSUSB Starbucks branch Employee, 22 years old:

"Honestly, it does not bug me. If it happens, it happens. I'm not going to be terrified of events like these because that is what they want you to be."

Julissa Diaz-Reyes, 20-years-old, a visitor on campus:

"I'm more prepared in a negative way... now I'm more aware that there are potential dangers in places you wouldn't expect it."

Kate Sumampong, 18-years-old, a first year:

"I don't feel comfortable with just anyone being able to walk onto on campus."

Rigo Orozco, 4th-year student, 24 years old:

"We should have gun safety training in the same way that we have sexual harassment awareness training each year. What we have is good, but it could be better."

Annette Gamino, 22-years-old, a third-year student:

"I feel like just giving us a time and a date... its really not going to make a difference... Our campus should host more workshops, or maybe even provide free supplies to students...."

Route 66 Back Again

Christine Muhar
Staff Writer

Saturday, Oct. 7, San Bernardino Area Chamber of Commerce (SBACC) hosted the 5th annual Route 66 Rendezvous in downtown San Bernardino.

This year, hundreds of car enthusiasts came to Route 66 Rendezvous to see over 1,000 cars, listen to music, eat good food, and have a great time with their families.

Alex Trujillo, who was raised in San Bernardino and has been coming to Route 66 since he was a kid, said he was excited because he was able to bring his '57 Chevy Sedan that he overhauled piece by piece over the course of several years.

Historically, the Route 66 car show started in 1990 in San Bernardino and over the decades has lasted between 2-4 days per year. Sadly, when the city went bankrupt in 2012, San Bernardino could no longer provide funding for the Route 66 car show.

Although SBACC debated on if they should restore it or not, they decided to step up and organize the city's beloved Route 66 Rendezvous.

Tito Nieto, who was participating with his '37 Ford Sedan, has been a car enthusiast for over 12 years. He enjoyed Route 66 Rendezvous and "hopes it will soon be restored to its former glory" of having Route 66 all weekend long instead of one day.

The family-friendly event provided something for everyone to see and do. Home Depot and the YMCA provided games and crafts for the children, while there were three beer gardens for the adults and cars for everyone to admire.

This year was the first year that Route 66 Rendezvous had a first responder row, which was held on Court Street. First responder row included fire engines, police cars, highway patrol cars, and even military trucks that were brought from the Norton Air Force Base Museum.

According to Judi Penman, the SBACC President, the vehicles were there for the children, but "big kids enjoy it too!"

Not only did people bring their families; they brought their entire car clubs too. Car clubs from all over the Inland Empire came to support Route 66 and be a part of history. Suavesitos, E St Cruisers, and L.A. Roadsters were all there, just to name a few.

Penman and San Bernardino residents love Route 66 Rendezvous because it provides something positive and a family-friendly event the entire community can be proud to attend.

Main Street Window Shopping

Small vintage shops grace the streets of downtown.

Rod iron chairs and doilies on tables set the tone for this vintage shop.

By Nallely Guzman
Staff Writer

The holiday season is just around the corner and if you want to start looking for the right place to buy gifts for the members of your family, Main Street is the perfect spot to go browsing local shops.

The famous Main Street is a pedestrian walkway mall located in the heart of Riverside, CA, stretching four blocks.

While taking a tour, you will be amazed at how rustic the area is, and you will have the opportunity to learn some of its history while window shopping in the best shops around there.

One of the recommendations before you start your window-shopping tour is to park in the parking structure located in the corner of Market Street and Mission Inn Avenue. Parking there is free the first 90 minutes and after 5 p.m.

Make sure you wear tennis shoes so you can window-shop comfortably.

Mission Galleria (across the street from the Mission Inn and in front of Coffee Bean) It is an amazing antique store where you can enjoy four floors with a wide range of merchandise like jewelry, antiques, collectibles, clothes, toys, furniture books, and much more. This antique store is a must-see due to the variety of collections and tastes.

Sweet Vintage Décor (near Prohibition) is a small yet quaint store where you can find decorations for your home. They change some of their merchandise in time for each holiday so you can stay up-to-date for those seasonal festivities. And what makes this store even more special is their Annie Sloan chalk paint that they sell to create an instant chalkboard on your wall. If you are trying to spruce up your home for the holidays, the people there will give you helpful tips so you can make the best of this specialty paint.

ELLIOT (located behind the Mission Inn and across from Prohibition) It is a boutique where you can find trendy and fashionable clothing. Most of the clothing that is sold in this store is actually designed and made there. So if you buy clothes and accessories from this shop, you will have unique pieces that you can wear without worrying about someone else copying you.

Downtown Apothecary (in front of Casey's cupcakes) It is the shop where you find all that has to do with bath and body. You can choose from handmade soaps of different scents, body scrubs, candles, oils, butters and creams. A sweet, fruity aroma will always greet you while shopping at this store.

MP Couture is a women's fashion boutique that features a diverse collection of clothing, shoes, jewelry and accessories.

Whether you are looking to have a fun day shopping for wearable art, designer goods and unique jewelry, or you just want to have a great time looking at unique objects, the whole block of stores on Main Street is a worthwhile destination. On the plus side, there are great restaurants with delicious food nearby where you can eat, or spas where you can relax after shopping. Why go all the way to LA when there are fun spots in the Inland Empire where you can have a one-of-kind shopping experience without straying too far from home?

Changes in Season; Changes in Fashion

By Hannah Centner
Staff Writer

Anne of Green Gables once said, "I'm so glad I live in a world where there are Octobers." We should all be glad too, because the changing of the seasons means a changing of the fashion trends!

As a college student and young adult, I love to be caught up on all the fashion and makeup trends as well.

I often get my ideas for makeup and clothing off of Pinterest. But this fall, I decided to set out and do some research about what is really "in" this season. I sat down with a local makeup artist, Crystal Leal, who does many runway shows for some insight.

I also talked to a Judy Jauregui, a manager at American Eagle in Cabazon, who has seen the trends come and go over the past 12 years in her store!

Leal discussed some super easy makeup advice with me to get your palette geared toward fall! When choosing eyeshadows, go for peachy or neutral tones. This means utilizing burnt oranges, beiges, browns, etc.

When doing your face as a whole, choose whether you want to dramatize your eyes, or your lips. If you want to focus on your lips, select a plum, red, or generally dark lipstick color. Pair it with a nude/natural eye, so you still have a fall look. This will keep your face from looking too dark.

Or, you can choose to do a dramatic eye look, possibly smoky or even metallic. If you opt for a dramatic eye, be sure to pair it with a nude or neutral lip.

When I spoke to Jauregui at American Eagle, she let me in on some of her favorite pieces, colors, and trends for the season.

Trends that are in right now for Fall include florals prints, plaids, and all types of denim, including skirts, jeans, and jackets. Snake print shoes, long printed kimonos, and long cardigans are also very in fashion.

The best colors for fall are jewel tones like burgundy, purple, golden yellow, deep teal, and olive green. The key ways to get a fall an autumn look are to throw on the layers and the accessories!

Add a scarf or a flannel to a basic shirt. You could even just add a sweater or some booties to dress stylishly and comfortably for the chilly weather. Skinny jeans are easy to pair with booties and military jackets are also very popular right now.

I came to the conclusion that the main way to switch up your fall look is in the details. It's super inexpensive to add scarves and warm colors to your wardrobe.

Drug Store v.s High End

By Brittany Stiner
Contributing Writer

Being a college girl means we don't have too much time to work or let alone get ready for class but what about the weekends when we want to let out the stress from all the work week and maybe even get ready for once?

College takes a lot of time out of your week which makes it hard to work which means were all on a budget and maybe can't afford those high-end brands and want to stick to those good Target finds.

Today, we are going to be comparing drug store foundation to a higher end foundations and to see if spending all that extra hard-earned money is worth packing on the debt after graduation.

Sephora is a holy grail walking through the aisles of name brand products.

Walking past Urban Decay, Laura Mercier, and Yves Saint Laurent might make your credit card run and hide, but when you buy high end its meant to last you longer and give you that coverage every girl dreams of.

Fenty Beauty is the hottest thing on the market to get your hands on. I was one of the lucky ones that purchased it the day it came out.

Rihanna is not just an icon in the music world, she is now becoming a staple to the cosmetic world as well.

Fenty Beauty came out with 40 different foundation shades meant for every girl of every complexion. Her foundation runs 34 dollars which is on the cheaper side of a higher end foundation.

This foundation gives you buildable full coverage as if you have an Instagram filter on your face. If you can get your hands on this life changing high end foundation, I would definitely recommend it. A dupe for this would be the Fit Me foundation by Maybelline. Fit me will give you that coverage, and its only six dollars.

Urban Decay all-nighter which runs for about 40 dollars is a foundation that is a full coverage, and matte. It lasts all day and you can wear it for an everyday look without looking overly done up for that 10 a.m. lecture.

Urban Decay All Nighter foundation is the definition of a little bit goes along way. This product myself has lasted me about a year. It's worth the price if you like something more on the high-end side of things. A nice dupe for this would-be Photo Focus foundation by wet n' wild for only six dollars!

If you don't mind spending a little bit more, and get that air brushed look you've been dreaming of, get ready with the Laura Mercier Flawless Fusion Ultra-Longwear Foundation that runs for 48 dollars. This foundation is for all skin types from oily, to combination skin. This foundation is matte finish, with a buildable 15-hour wear. A wonderful, hands down holy grail dupe for this is the Loreal Infallible foundation for 12 dollars!

Being a college girl makes life busy but one thing we should never be too busy for is feeling confident in ourselves. If you can afford Fenty, Urban Decay, and even Yves Saint Laurent then you run to Sephora.

If you're more of a Target girl, that's fine too! Grab that Maybelline, and Wet n' Wild.

When it comes to foundation and makeup in general, it doesn't matter how much you spend. What matters most is how you feel, and the confidence you get while you rock your new look.

Kill Sweet Tooth, Keep the Bikini Bod

It's the season for yummy holiday treats to start making their way into everyone's kitchen. Contrary to popular belief, there are healthy desserts you can indulge in without gaining that holiday weight. So put down those pumpkin cheesecakes and throw away the peppermint barks, because there is a new dessert in town.

A recipe that many people should know about is dark chocolate peanut butter-filled bananas. This easy, convenient recipe only involves three items. You'll just need to get bananas and cut them in spheres. After this is done, get parchment paper over a pan and put each banana sphere on them.

You'll need to spread a generous helping of peanut butter on each banana slice, then top it off with another banana sphere to make it like a sandwich.

While doing this, take dark chocolate chips and put them in a bowl and microwave them until they have melted.

After the dark chocolate has melted, dip each banana sandwich in the bowl until each one is fully coated. Freeze the chocolate-covered bananas for about 20 minutes, and then dig in! A low calorie treat awaits without you feeling the guilt afterwards.

A new favorite of mine that does fine on its own yet won't break the bank is Rx Bars from Sprouts or Trader Joes. These protein bars have flavors such as pumpkin spice, salted chocolate, peanut butter chocolate, and coconut chocolate chip. They are high in fiber, protein, potassium, and taste just like a candy bar.

Another sweet little thing you can get from Sprouts is dark chocolate-covered rice cakes. You put those bad boys in the fridge for 30 minutes, then cover one side with Buff Bake almond butter, I use the cookie dough flavor, and boom! You have a high protein, low calorie, sweet treat.

Let me introduce the ice cream that'll make you question the accuracy of the nutrition facts on the label. Enlightened Ice Cream can be purchased at Sprouts. It contains about 400 calories for the entire carton. Yes, you read that right. You can kill that whole carton while binging on Lifetime movies and not feel like a whale afterwards.

Greek yogurt is also very high in protein and low in sugar and carbohydrates if you buy the plain flavor. To make it a bit more tasty, you can add a teaspoon of honey, a tablespoon of cocoa powder, dark chocolate chips, and strawberries. Mix the ingredients together before adding the strawberries. Let the mix sit in the fridge for 10 minutes if you want a creamier consistency.

Now, if you are a lemon fiend, please hold on to your taste-buds. You'll need one cup of lemon Greek yogurt, a teaspoon of honey, one tablespoon of lemon juice, and blueberries, if you'd like. Mix all these ingredients together and place them in a cupcake sheet. Let the mix freeze for four hours and have made guilt-free lemon bars with a twist.

Having a sweet tooth is nothing to be ashamed of, and now you'll have a few tricks up your sleeve that will have your friends wondering how you managed to stay in shape this winter.

Keeping on to your diet while satisfying the sweet tooth is easier than some people think.

DIY: Halloween Girl

By Brittany Stiner
Staff Writer

If you're looking for the latest, greatest, and the trendiest Halloween costumes for the Halloween season, then look no further.

Halloween is the best time of year to jump out of your comfort zone and try on a different persona for a weekend.

Whether you're part of a couple, single, or just with a group of friends looking for a good time, I have a costume for you.

This year proved that not only men can be heroes. Wonder Woman stole box office sales and showed a different light for women in Hollywood.

Wonder Woman is one of the most popular costumes out on the market today. If you're all about the girl power, get your hands on this costume at any of your local Halloween stores or create the look yourself with a dress/skirt, and a sword are a must.

But, what is Halloween without a little bit of mayhem?

Harley Quinn is definitely the costume for those little monsters out there.

Instead of her signature shorts and property of Joker bomber jacket, go for a more classic look with her signature jester look and play with that face makeup because clowns are in this year!

This year was not only a great year for movies, but for television as well.

Costumes for television shows such as Stranger Things and Game of Thrones are going to be some of the most popular costumes once again.

Stranger Things is the reason why the 80s came back in style and Eggos became your dream breakfast again.

Eleven from Stranger Things is going to steal our hearts when it comes back on Netflix on Oct. 27, so steal her look as you attempt to dress up as the brain crushing, waffle loving girl on Halloween.

For the DIY girl out there, all you need is a box of Eggos, a blonde wig, pink dress, tube socks, white converse, and don't forget about the blood!

Winter came a little early this year, but that doesn't mean it will be too cold to dress up as our favorite Game of Thrones characters.

Let's keep Game of Thrones relevant while we dress up as the Mother of Dragons, Jon Snow, Cersei, or Missandei.

Do a cool DIY Mother of Dragons with some plastic dragons, blue dress, and blonde wig or head to your local Halloween store and stock up on those props.

Alright, alright, enough with the cute Halloween costumes. It's time to grab your cauldron, and maybe sleep with the lights on for this part.

Stephen King's IT will continue to haunt your dreams, but for those girls that live for the blood and gore, you can remake this Halloween look and scare your friends.

YouTube star Nicole Guerrero perfected the Pennywise costume with a few easy steps that will make people fear being alone with you.

Grab a red balloon, face paint, red lipstick, and a ruffled collar, and you have yourself a DIY Pennywise look.

Back in 1993, Hocus Pocus's Winifred Sanderson made you fear Halloween, and drool over Thackery Binx (the human version of course).

This year, Spirit Halloween rolled out two Hocus Pocus costumes exclusively to their stores.

If you want to dress up as

A make-shift Daenerys Targaryen costume

the queen diva herself Winifred Sanderson, or maybe the not-so-bright Sara Sanderson, the choice is up to you!

For some, Halloween is just a children's holiday, but for others, it's a lifestyle. So, burn those fall candles, turn on your favorite horror movie marathon, and start to think about the way you're going to steal the show this Halloween.

Cheese Plate

By Spencer Reifel
Staff Writer

If you have never socialized around a cheese plate this might be a start in the right direction.

This perfect cheese plate will have to have a few staples to make your guests happy to sit down and snack on.

For a cheese plate, you will need cheese, of course, nuts, cold cut meats, and crackers; you want these to play off each other and pair well.

You want your plate to flow well and make it easy to grab and snack with great flavor

Cheese expert, Sharon Martinez from Challenge Dairy stated that the most important part of a cheese plate the different textures of cheese such as, soft, semi-soft, etc.

Choose your cheeses with different textures. Go for a soft and creamy cheese such as Imported Brie (or a similar artisan-style cheese made in our area); a firmer style cheese such as cheddar (preferably farmhouse), gouda or Gruyère; and a hard grating-style cheese like Parmigiano-Reggiano.

“You usually only pick 3 cheeses due to cost as there are other items such as fresh baguette, fresh fruit, fig spread, nuts etc. to complete the plate,” said Martinez.

Here is a guideline to make a simple but great cheese plate with three cheeses and a few pairing item. There will be a soft, semi-soft and hard cheese.

Soft cheeses are typically young cheeses that have been aged two months or less.

The soft cheese would be a goat cheese. Goat cheese is a fresh cheese that has been aged from 10 days to 10 weeks, very short aging. This cheese is fresh and soft with a sweet and delicate taste with undertones of acid and salt.

You can add a cracker to spread the soft goat cheese on with some honey.

Typically, semi-soft cheeses have been aged a little bit more than soft cheese and have less moisture. As cheese ages, its moisture level decreases and the cheese becomes more firm.

The semi-soft cheese would be a nice Boschetto truffle cheese. It’s aged for 2 months and is a blend of sheep’s milk, cow’s milk, and truffles. It has a blend of fresh and rustic flavors which makes for an addictive delicacy that’s sweet and savory. Combine cold cuts like salami with the Boschetto for that savory and salty flavor.

Hard cheeses, the most aged cheeses, are rich in flavor and dry in texture. These are the cheeses that are firm enough to grate.

The hard cheese will be a nice aged gouda, that has been aged for over 18 months, with this age you get a firm texture with some crystallization, a deep ochre interior, and notes of toasted walnuts and a brown-butter finish.

Enjoy the aged hard Gouda with some nuts like almonds or walnuts to bring out the nutty flavors.

“People love to try farmstead cheese, local cheeses have excellent texture and flavor and they can buy them in their local cheese shop,” said Martinez. “Especially those who have money really want to impress their friends with new and exciting cheeses they have tried but cost a lot.”

A good cheese plate doesn’t have to be expensive with the right combination of cheeses and some creativity.

The Coyotes clinched the CCAA title at home last season.

The Coyotes started the season on the road, going 4-4 over two weekend tournaments.

Hailey Jackson scored 21.5 points v Sonoma State.

Leilia To'omalatai averages 3.9 digs per set.

Lauren Nicholson has recorded 1,000+ career kills.

To'omalatai earned 31 digs v Wayne State. She has 260+ in her freshman year.

The Coyotes will play five of their next six games at home starting Oct. 21.

Hollimon and 'Yotes eye the playoffs

By Evelyn Carmona
Staff Writer

Before becoming the women's head soccer coach, LeBaron Hollimon racked up many years of experience as both a soccer player and coach.

"I played, professionally, indoor soccer for ten years from 1991 to 2001," said Hollimon.

He began his career with the Wichita Wings in Kansas before moving onto the Edmonton Drillers in Canada, and lastly, the Kansas City Attack.

Hollimon enjoyed his time playing professionally, as well as living in different cities. Now he cannot imagine being anywhere else than in San Bernardino.

He has a passion for both the sport and coaching.

After being an assistant coach to the men's soccer team in 2014, Hollimon was given the opportunity to be the interim head coach for the women's team in 2015.

"The opportunity to be a head coach and implement my philosophies at CSUSB excites me," said Hollimon. "I am motivated to do well with the history that exists here in women's soccer."

During his interim head coach season in 2015, five of his players were named to the CCAA Fall Academic Team.

In 2016, Hollimon was named the official head coach of the women's soccer team.

"There isn't a better place for me," said Hollimon.

During the 2016 season, Hollimon led the team to their first home playoff game in the CCAA Tournament. The team finished in third place overall in the CCAA.

So far this season, Hollimon's lady Coyotes have won six games, lost six games and tied in one.

The team is currently tied for fifth place with Cal State San Marcos in the CCAA standings.

Their first conference game, played against Cal State LA, was a 2-0 loss.

In the next two conference games, the Coyotes fared quite a bit better, winning 1-0 against Dominguez Hills and 2-0 against Monterey Bay.

The Coyotes continued their winning ways with a nail-biting 2-1 overtime win against Cal State East Bay. However, the team went on to lose three consecutive games against Cal State San Marcos (2-0), UC San Diego (1-0) and Sonoma State (2-1).

The team snapped out of their funk on Oct. 8, shutting out Humboldt State 5-0.

Hollimon and the Coyotes only have a few more games before the CCAA playoffs are set to start on Oct. 31.

The top six teams will make it to the playoffs.

In order to open the playoffs at home, the lady Coyotes must finish the season in third or fourth place. Hollimon's team players have long weeks ahead for the rest of the season and the CCAA Tournament.

Nevertheless, Hollimon's love and passion for soccer has been reflected throughout his professional years. His knowledge of the sport will continue to help grow the CSUSB women's soccer team.

Title IX continues help athletes thrive

The Title IX law was signed by Richard Nixon in 1972. It helped give female athletes access to the same opportunities as the male athletes, such as scholarships.

By Breeze Rivers
Staff Writer

Female college athletes were not always given the same opportunities as their male counterparts, but that all changed thanks to the Title IX law and support from the Women's Sports Foundation (WSF).

More than 50 years ago, tennis legend Billie Jean King attended Cal State LA. Despite her outstanding athletic talents, she could not receive an athletic scholarship because of her gender.

Today, King is known as former World No. 1 professional tennis player. She won a total of 39 Grand Slam titles, six Wimbledon singles championships and four U.S. Open titles.

King won the singles title at the inaugural Women's Tennis Association (WTA) Tour Championships and was ranked No. 1 in the world for five years.

In 1974, King founded the WSF in San Francisco. The sports foundation makes an effort to help other female athletes, like King, who have solid athletic abilities but do not have equal opportunities as male athletes.

The foundation she created is committed to providing athletes with the exposure they need to advance in their sports or to transition to successful careers after competition. They also help female athletes find funding to pay for their education while playing a collegiate sport.

According to the WSF website, before 1972, only one in 27 girls played sports.

In the late 1800's and early 1900's, many people were against women in sports, and efforts to limit women's sports activity were high.

Activities for women were recreational rather than sport-specific and competitive. They played informally and without rules. The focus was on getting in exercise and physical activity rather than the competition itself.

Women's opportunities to compete in sports were limited in America until Federal Legislation, known as Title IX, became law.

Title IX was passed by President Nixon in 1972. It prohibits discrimination based on sex in any educational program receiving federal aid.

Title IX states that: "No person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any educational program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance."

This law is important because it allows females participating in collegiate sports to receive scholarship money.

Title IX requires America to recognize a woman's right to participate in sports on a plane equal to that of men. The law also discourages sexual discrimination in education and sports.

According to the WSF website, today, two in five girls play sports. There has been a dramatic increase in women's participation rates since 1972.

Title IX and the WSF are important because they help ensure that every girl has access to not only sports but the lifelong benefits they offer as well.

Female athletes receive the opportunity to play, the opportunity to scholarship benefits, and competitive play prepares them for life.

By participating in competitive sports, women gain confidence, learn how to win and lose and learn skills such as team-building.

Today, more than 150,000 women are competing in sports at the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) level.

Women make up more than 40 percent of the participants in intercollegiate athletics and receive about 43 percent of scholarships (according to the WSF website).

Women made their first appearance in the Olympic Games in Paris in 1900. That year, 22 women competed in tennis, sailing, croquet, equestrianism and golf.

Here at CSUSB, female university athletes believe there is a move closer to equality between male and female athletes although certain discriminations still exist.

"I think Title IX is there to do what it's supposed to, and at the collegiate level a school is able to enforce it, but in society, the gender pay gap still exists," Crystal Becerra, former CSUSB women's soccer player said.

Overall, female athletes now have the opportunity and platform to showcase their athletic ability, which is a historical achievement that should be celebrated.

Rise, fall and revival of the Dodgers

By Lucero Roman
Staff Writer

The Los Angeles Dodgers' roller coaster of a regular season ends as they enter the playoffs with over 100 wins, clinching the National League West Division (NL West) title for the fifth consecutive year.

The Dodgers were not the only team in Major League Baseball (MLB) with over 100 wins. Alongside them was the Houston Astros and Cleveland Indians.

The Dodgers went from holding a high winning record to holding the longest losing streak in Dodgers history over the course of the season.

This season, fans saw the Dodgers rise with the most wins thus far and fall with a 16 game losing streak.

This was the longest losing streak in Dodgers history, as they lost 16 out of 17 games.

"After winning so many games I forgot what it felt like to lose," said CSUSB senior Mari-bel Manjarrez. "The losing streak was a humbling experience for myself and many Dodgers fans that we could have lived without."

MLB teams in the past that have won over 100 games have historically not won the World Series. The Oakland Athletics won over 100 games in 1988, but lost the World Series to the Dodgers.

This season, the Dodgers were close to making team history with the most wins compared to the 1953 Brooklyn Dodgers who ended the season with 105 wins.

"Winning the NL West means nothing if the Dodgers cannot make it to the big show," said CSUSB junior Juan Miranda. "The Dodgers have a tendency of choking when it matters."

Dodger fans have witnessed five consecutive NL West titles, and this season, they are expecting a ticket to the World Series.

"Dodger fans are expecting consistency for the postseason and hoping to go to the big show," said Manjarrez.

This year, the Dodgers added right-handed pitcher, Yu Darvish, from the Texas Rangers to their roster to bolster their starting rotation and kept Kenley Jansen, who has recorded over 40 saves this season.

Clayton Kershaw, the Dodgers No. 1 pitcher, missed several games but the Dodgers managed to win games without their ace.

"Adding to the pitching staff has given the other pitchers time to adjust while taking care of the bullpen," Miranda said. "The Dodgers have players who can play multiple positions and still execute, like the rookie Cody Bellinger."

Their young players such as Bellinger, Chris Taylor, and Corey Seager have kept their bats and defense alive.

The vets, like Darvish, Curtis Granderson and Chase Utley have been vital to the team as the young players have taken on different positions.

With all the new additions and positioning players, the Dodgers are lining up to potentially rise or fall in what Dodgers fans hope to be a Blue October.

The Dodgers have not made an appearance in the World Series since they last won it in 1988 over the Athletics.

"We have more than an adequate team; we just need to take it game by game," said Miranda.

The Dodgers swept the Diamondbacks in the National League Division Series to move on to the National League Championship Series. They will face the Cubs in a best of seven series.

Baseball quickly approaching World Series

By Anthony Perez
Staff Writer

October has finally arrived, and while most people are excited for fall festivities and haunted hayrides, the forgotten gem of the month is the baseball postseason.

For the casual baseball fan, this is the time of year to turn on some games and see those special moments.

Last year's playoffs featured one of the most memorable outcomes in recent history that was full of unforgettable plays and moments. Ultimately, the Chicago Cubs and Cleveland Indians made it to the World Series, two teams that hadn't won a title in 108 years and 68 years, respectively.

Last year's World Series was a thrilling seven-game series that featured the Cubs coming back from being down by three runs to take it all, ending their 108-year drought.

The final game of the series drew over 40 million viewers, which was the largest audience since the 1991 World Series, with the Atlanta Braves and the Minnesota Twins playing. It is going to be tough following up a great series like last year's, but the potential teams for this year should not disappoint.

This year's field included the New York Yankees, Boston Red Sox, Los Angeles Dodgers, Chicago Cubs, Houston Astros, Cleveland Indians, Arizona Diamondbacks and the Washington Nationals. These eight teams battled it out over the course of October to try and earn a spot in the World Series.

The series is scheduled to begin on Oct. 24 and could potentially go through Nov. 1.

Baseball's regular season has 162 games, which can be time-consuming for the average viewer, so the playoffs are when you see more excitement for the game.

"I don't really watch baseball during the regular season," said student, Gio Gonzalez. "I like the atmosphere better when the playoffs start because the games start to get more interesting to me."

Watching a batter hit a home run in mid-July is still exciting, but when a home run is hit during the postseason, you can see the difference in emotion from the players and fans.

There's not one single aspect of the playoffs that adds to the emotion: it's a combination of atmosphere, emotion, and added urgency. This is what makes the playoffs such a fun and unpredictable event every October.

Regardless of where you go, the playoffs are everywhere. Whether it is a local sports bar to meet with friends for wings or sitting down for a family dinner, televisions everywhere are tuned in to the Major League Baseball playoffs. A great example of a perfect place to watch the playoffs is PizzaDilly.

PizzaDilly is a Dodgers-themed pizza restaurant in Colton where many Dodgers fans gathered on Oct. 5 to watch the Dodgers vs Diamondbacks game. Owner Anthony Lewis sees a difference in his customer's enthusiasm during the regular season and during the postseason.

"Everybody has their eyes on the TVs around the restaurant and can't take them off," said Lewis. "During the regular season, you see people come in for a few innings and take off, but if you come in during the playoffs, you're here for a few hours."

Now the final four teams have been set as the championship series startup.

The Yankees are set to take on the Astros in the American League and the Dodgers are set to take on the Cubs in the National League.

With teams from four major cities--Los Angeles, New York, Houston, and Chicago--everyone will have a team to root for.

Whether you want to cheer for Clayton Kershaw and the hometown Dodgers or the rookie sensation, California local Aaron Judge with the New York Yankees, baseball playoffs are ramping up for one crazy month.

Movie Review: "IT" Takes Over The Box Office

As the movie "It" was released there has been positive reviews on how the movie was terrifying while others felt there was too much comedy.

By Daniel Banks
Staff Writer

The film It was released to theaters on September 8, just in time for the Halloween season.

The movie is a remake of the original 1990 miniseries that was adapted from the novel of the same name by Stephen King.

The budget for It was $35 million, but it grossed twice as much at the box office. The film made a record breaking $500.7 million worldwide.

The plot revolves around a small town called Derry, Maine where seven young high school outcasts are forced to face their fears when they are targeted by an evil creature.

They decide to join forces to take down a demented and murdering clown that goes by the name of Pennywise.

This group of fearful, yet courageous outcasts is led by Bill, a young boy who's hopeful search for his brother Georgie, leads him to help his group of friends to face their fears head on and take the power from Pennywise.

Along with Bill his friends Stan, Beverly, Eddie, Ben, Richie and Mike each character delivers a performance that although, the movie takes place in 1989 many viewers can still relate to now 27 years later.

Ben is new to the school and town and he is mainly to himself and not very social. Just like everyone that is apart of the group, he is bullied. He is very knowledgeable of the town's history and the group uses it to their advantage.

Beverly is the only girl in the group and is a social outcast in school also because of rumors swirling around campus about her. She comes from a troubled household and she puts on a brave face that everything is okay when in reality she is hurting and scared for her life.

Richie is the outspoken person of the group who has no filter and says exactly what's on his mind. He likes to be the center of attention and he will keep the audience laughing with his brash humor.

Eddie is the one person out of the group that faced his fear the most in the film. He is very sheltered and timid due to certain health issues. Throughout the film, the audience will see his progression from being scared to developing his true strength.

Mike is a home school student and outsider from the other side of town. He lost his parents in tragedy when he was younger and because of that it made him vulnerable and fearful.

Lastly, Stan comes from a religious background with his father being a Jewish rabbi. He is not very fond of religion and it is very upsetting to his father. Over the course of the film, he discovers his true self.

This movie will have everyone jumping out of their seats in fear. It is very suspenseful from beginning to end and the scares are on another level.

The film has gotten so much praise as the highest grossing horror film of all time and people are saying that it is better than the original television version.

"IT" was an amazing movie and by looking at the imagery it shows that the creators of the film took their time and made sure that the audience would be terrified. There was also some comedic humor in the film to balance out the scare factor.

In my opinion, I believe that IT was a good movie and much more detailed than the original miniseries and gorier too.

Moses Sumney Album Review: Aromanticism is One of the Best Albums of 2017

By Isaac Cardenas
Staff Writer

Establishing his position as the next up and coming artist to watch for, singer-songwriter Moses Sumney's debut is a stunner and one of the year's best.

Thanks to world renown singer and songwriter Solange, Moses has gained mass attention with his latest release from Jagjaguwar Records.

The record is packed with calm and cool tracks that showcase his unique falsetto vocals and cool acoustic riffs that can be heard on popular tracks like "Plastic."

Sumney was born in San Bernardino, California but he moved with his family to Ghana when he was 10 years old. And it was only when Sumney moved back to California to attend UCLA that he taught himself to play guitar.

I first heard his music in 2015 when I discovered his 2014 EP Mid-City Island. It was one of those lo-fi gems that you find on Bandcamp. It sounded like folk music, but it was experimental in its approach.

His sound has been described as R&B, but I feel like this description did not fit his music. I would describe his music as being experimental folk/soul. He reminds me of experimental folk artists such as Joanna Newsman, Sufjan Stevens, or Jessica Pratt.

Some artists sign to a major label and totally change their sound, but Sumney does not fall into that trap and maintains his sound from his EP.

The production on Aromanticism sounds better from his earlier work, but not so much that he sounds completely different.

Listening to the album for the first time, I was blown away.

The second track, "Don't Bother Calling," is a highlight. Some of the elements that I like about it are the strings that creep out throughout the track creating tension, Sumney's fingerpicking guitar, and his voice which is layered, creating these beautiful haunting harmonies.

The album is interesting because it sounds intimate and fragile while other songs sound dramatic and big.

An example would be "Indulge Me," which mostly just features his voice and guitar while there are other songs on the album that sound dramatic like the spoken-word song, "Stoicism," and the album's best track, "Quarrel," which changes musically over the duration of the song.

Listening to the album, I kept thinking how these songs could be performed acoustically in a small coffee shop or a big concert hall with an orchestra.

I was also caught by surprise throughout the album with how some songs start off sounding sparse and then builds into something much bigger like the track, "Lonely Word."

Thematically I feel like the lyrics on the album were somewhat vague, but I really enjoyed that aspect. I am not a big fan of songs that are obvious because it doesn't allow people to have their own interpretations of them.

The album's title, which means a person who experiences little or no romantic attraction to others, says enough in my opinion to some of the things Sumney could be singing about.

If someone were to ask me about what type of genre you would place him, I would say he falls into a variety of genres and it's unfair to put him in one rigid box.

On Aromanticism, he thrillingly bypasses strict genre terms and blends different elements of folk, electronic, and soul music to create one of the year's most exciting and unconventional debuts.

Las Brisas: Restaurant Review

By Michael Embry
Staff Writer

Beyond the cascading valley of Laguna and through jagged and busy streets, seafood restaurant, Las Brisas, is nestled amongst the cliffs.

Located at 361 Cliff Drive in Laguna Beach, it is only about 50 steps from Laguna Beach itself, and 1.6 miles from the Montage Laguna Resort.

Because of its premiere location and ocean-view, I expected this restaurant to be extremely pricy.

However, as the reviews raved, the food was affordable and the portions were well worth the prices.

As I walked into the restaurant, I could feel the ocean breeze hit my face, carrying with it the smell of fresh pico de gallo and filet mignon.

Michael is the manager of the restaurant.

The restaurant features both indoor and outdoor seating arrangements.

The newly renovated inside of the restaurant emulates that of a 5-star restaurant. It features wood aesthetics, with clean white walls and ocean-colored pastels.

to the bar, which was manned by bartender Julio Gonzalez.

“With our wide selection of drinks and cocktails, the bar is always busy and I quite enjoy that,” Gonzalez said.

The outside patio boasts a panoramic view of Laguna Beach below.

There was also a wide assortment of tables, featuring umbrellas for shade and heaters for when the breeze gets too chilly.

I was seated by arguably the best waiter I’ve ever had, Riccardo Garcia. He was kind, energetic, flamboyant, and had a contagious spirit and laugh.

The menu was simple, self-explanatory, and showed off the cheap prices.

For an appetizer and drink, I ordered the fresh chips with ceviche and the passion fruit maitais.

The chips and ceviche came first and they certainly did not disappoint.

The chips were warm, fresh, and garnished with a hint of lime salt to allow the perfectly seasoned crunch to the palette.

The ceviche was delectable. I could taste the swordfish and crab, which paired nicely together.

My drink came next. It was a refreshing blend of fruits that was crispy and sweet but not too strong, which I thoroughly enjoyed.

Next, it was time for the main course and I could hardly wait.

Due to high recommendation and Yelp popularity, I ordered the filet mignon and bacon tacos.

The wait time was 37 minutes and for good reason. The tacos were gorgeous, each one separated on a metal rack.

They were stuffed with a healthy portion of filet mignon and topped with fresh guacamole.

As a bit into my first taco, I was nostalgically transported onto the shores of Cabo San Lucas, Mexico.

The tenderness of the filet mignon and the freshness of the guacamole truly was incredible.

Evangeline McCoy, a frequent at the restaurant, ordered the tacos as well.

“The tacos are some of the best I’ve ever had, and on top of that, there’s a view to match,” said McCoy.

Her brother, Eric McCoy, ordered the grilled shrimp salad.

“The ingredients are fresh and authentic. There’s nowhere else I’d rather enjoy the food as well,” he stated.

If you’re into breathtaking views and flavorful ingredients, be prepared to dive into an experience worth-while at Las Brisas.
